WINE CORK TILES

WINE CORK TILES are made using a mixture of approximately 75% whole post-consumer wine corks, 25% granulated post-industrial cork from Portugal with polyurethane as the binder. They are all thoroughly mixed together and poured into a mold and with the addition of heat, are pressed into a solid block. The block is then sliced into sheets which are sanded on one side. The result is a completely safe, non-toxic material that causes no harm to the environment during its manufacture or use and helps to minimize waste.

YEMM & HART has been a family business since 1981. They are located in the northeastern section of the Mark Twain National Forest in Madison County, Missouri USA. The business specializes in combining materials and processes to create new products which are both unique and useful.
