Some of the earliest evidence of written text can be found on clay tablets from Sumer and Meso-America. The CCA Ceramics department continues this ceramic based fascination of text through writing, cataloging, interventions and interpretation of books, text, language and media. This fascination is most easily summed up in our newest form of visual language, the ideogram (aka the emoji).

WOODY DE OTHELLO (MFA '17) STOREFRONT INSTALLATION

“ode to waking up,
super early and immediately pouring hot water through the coffee dripper into your mug, setting it aside to cool down for a split second but realize you don't have enough time to enjoy it and read like hoped for, should've been out the door and on the way ten minutes ago but spent way too long choosing something you were comfortable and felt good wearing, willingly ignoring the time because you don't want to go in the first place.

out the door and that cup of coffee doesn't cross your mind until well on your way”
