Thomas Demand is a German photographer and sculptor who works with paper. His book The Dailies is a documentation of his daily life. The images are paper sculptures that were then photographed with a 4x5 camera and printed using the dye transfer printing process. These images are a result of a tedious process that take weeks to construct, hours to develop and days to print.

Our bootleg is an exercise in returning the images to their original form: paper. Our book breaks down Demand's formal process and instead leaves only the outlines of his images, which the viewer can fill in themselves as a coloring book.
